You can get your life back: It starts here

“We treatment works and sometimes can be fun, plus you get your Life back.”

~ Ann B. Beeder, MD
Medical Director; Leading psychiatric and public health care expert

We know what it takes to help you get free of drug dependence, stay that way, and move on to a fulfilling life.

Part of one of the world’s most prestigious medical colleges
Access to the latest research on effective therapeutic interventions
Trained in cutting-edge evidence-based techniques

We are a team of highly trained psychiatrists, pediatricians, psychologists, social workers, certified substance abuse counselors, art therapists, and outdoor recreation therapists, who are working in partnership to continually bring you the best of what we currently know about treating drug addiction.

Weill Cornell Medicine Treatment Program

Adolescents and young adults are unique and require unique substance use interventions. That’s why our program begins with a comprehensive and confidential intake assessment to determine which treatment makes the most sense for each individual. Treatment is customized, comprehensive and holistic focusing on the mind, the body and the spirit.

We offer a variety of evidence-based, experiential methods, alongside proven traditional methods, to employ harm reduction techniques with a goal of abstinence.

Our therapies address substance use issues as well as mental health concerns. This approach helps each individual develop the coping skills necessary for addressing substance use triggers, managing stress, anxiety and anger, and improving physiological health and the mind-body connection.

Our outpatient treatment is designed to be flexible, with hours 5 days per week including 4 evenings, so you can still attend school or go to work.
